The Baltic Sea is a sea of the Atlantic Ocean, enclosed by Scandinavia, Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Russia, Poland, Germany and the North and Central European Plain. The sea stretches from 53°N to 66° N latitude and from 10°E to 30°E longitude.

Copenhagen, Denmark

Copenhagen is the capital of Denmark, situated on the eastern coast of the island of Zealand. Originally a Viking fishing village founded in the 10th century, Copenhagen became the capital of Denmark in the early 15th century. Copenhagen's landmarks such as Tivoli Gardens, the Little Mermaid Statue, the Amalienborg and Christiansborg palaces, Rosenborg Castle Gardens, Frederik's Church, and many museums make it a notable tourist attraction.

Frederiksborg Slot is the largest Renaissance castle in northern Europe. The castle is the work of King Christian IV, who had the manor house where he was born in 1577 replaced by the castle complex during the first two decades of the 17th century. The palace was largely destroyed by fire in 1859, but rebuilt. The Frederiksborg Castle Chapel of 1617, that mostly escaped damage from the fire, contains the 1000-pipe Compenius Organ, built in 1610.

Roskilde was named the new capital of Denmark by King Harald Bluetooth around the year 960. Construction of the Roskilde Domkirke was started between 1060–1073. With the exception of the two towers on the west facade, the cathedral was completed by 1280, and in 1405, work on the towers was completed. The cathedral has been the main burial site for Danish monarchs since the 15th century.

St. Petersburg, Russia

Saint Petersburg is Russia's second-largest city after Moscow, situated on the Neva River, at the head of the Gulf of Finland on the Baltic Sea. It was founded by Tsar Peter the Great in 1703. In 1914, the name was changed to Petrograd and in 1924 to Leningrad then in 1991 back to Saint Petersburg. The city was built by conscripted peasants from all over Russia and a number of Swedish prisoners of war. Tens of thousands of serfs died building the city. Saint Petersburg is home to the Hermitage, one of the largest art museums in the world.

The fortress of Peter and Paul was established by Peter the Great in 1703. From around 1720, the fort served as a base for the city garrison and also as a prison for high-ranking prisoners. The fortress contains several buildings clustered around the Peter and Paul Cathedral. The Cathedral is the first and oldest landmark in St. Petersburg, built between 1712 and 1733; it has a 122.5 m (402 ft) and a gilded angel-topped cupola. The cathedral is the burial place of all Russian tsars from Peter I to Alexander III, with the exception of Peter II and Ivan VI.

Saint Isaac's Cathedral is the largest Russian Orthodox cathedral in St. Petersburg, dedicated to Saint Isaac of Dalmatia, a patron saint of Peter the Great. The cathedral took 40 years to construct, from 1818 to 1858. The cathedral's main dome rises 101.5 metres (333 ft) and is plated with pure gold.

The interior was originally decorated with scores of paintings by great Russian masters of the day, but when these paintings began to deteriorate due to the cold, damp conditions, Montferrand ordered them to be painstakingly reproduced as mosaics.

The State Hermitage Museum in Saint Petersburg is the second-largest art museum in the world. It was founded in 1764 when Empress Catherine the Great acquired a collection of paintings from the Berlin merchant Johann Ernst Gotzkowsky, and has been open to the public since 1852. Its collections, of which only a small part is on permanent display, comprise over three million items, including the largest collection of paintings in the world.

The Church of the Savior on Spilled Blood is one of the main sights of Saint Petersburg, Russia, built on the site of assassination of Alexander II in 1881. The church contains over 7500 square meters of mosaics (according to its restorers, more than any other church in the world.) An elaborate shrine, in the form of a ciborium, was constructed at one end of the church on the exact place of Alexander's assassination.

The Vasa is a Swedish warship that was built from 1626 to 1628. The ship sank after sailing less than a nautical mile into her maiden voyage on August 10, 1628. Most of her valuable bronze cannons were salvaged in the 17th century. She was located again in the late 1950s, just outside the Stockholm harbor, and her largely intact hull was raised on April 24, 1961.
